PRESS RELEASE

optegra opens new office in Munich - Auditing and tax consulting firm shows its colors in Southern Germany

Customers in and around the European metropolis of Munich can now call on more than 50 specialists for auditing, tax consulting, fund services and management consulting.

COLOGNE, March 13, 2009 - optegra, the auditing, tax and management consulting group has continued to expand its nationwide presence. It has opened its own offices in Munich, giving customers in and around this European metropolis access to more than 50 specialists for auditing, tax consulting, fund services and management consulting. "Our new location is the result of our company's constant growth and the increasing demand for our national and international consulting services," explained Stefan Neubauer, one of optegra's co-founders.

Munich is one of Germany's key cities and enjoys constant economic growth. optegra has done justice to this growth by opening its own offices there. The Cologne-based group of companies focuses on German SMEs, which means that for many years it has been one of the first ports of call for all phases of corporate development at a national and international level. optegra is already represented in the key financial and economic centers in more than 20 countries with more than 1,000 employees via the Norton International Services Network.

"Proximity to our clients in Bavaria's capital city is a decisive factor for our company in opening this office. In spite of this, however, even in the age of globalization international expertise in tax, finance and business is a must-have to stay successful," commented Johannes Nölke, one of optegra's co-founders and fund specialist. "Forward-looking, well-founded advice and personal contact are vital given the current economic situation, and have caused us to take this step of opening our own offices in Munich," Nölke added.
